Let us in the primary for the candidate of their Governor, United States senator and a keener interest than for many years other offices are to be chosen later on. in the campaign. them. Our business to-day is to choose our local candidates, and it is the patriotic duty of every Democratic voter his opinion, is best qualified to discharge the duties of the position. The right to vote, as we have been trying to impress a thing not to be trifled with. The man goes without saying. But a man also to an unworthy candidate, when there is a better candidate running, as a matter inferior candidate, or because the candidate "needs the office." He has no moral right to use his ballot to bestow favors. His first duty is to his govern his ballot to promote the welfare of

That is taking high ground, but does not every patriotic 'man want to take high ground? The Virginia voter is supto be the highest type of American citizen, and in casting his vote he should live up to his reputation. You may help your friend in other ways, and should do so; but you should not help him You should not employ a privilege which the government has given you to the injury of the government's service. There are good men running for office to-day When you go into the booth, study the list of names carefully, Then choose as your candidates the men who, in your not be your fault. You will have done best, and let the results take care of legalized primaries are in the interes themselves.

Germany's Triumph.

The little game of diplomacy which Germany, France and Great Britain are now playing has a broader significance than the so-called Moroccan question The Moroccan question is summed up in the following paragraph:

"The empire having fallen into intolerably evil ways, France, having by far the largest interests therein, proposed to exert her influence at the Shereefian court for reform. Great Britain and Spain, the powers next concerned, cordially approved this course, and Morocco assented. Germany alone objected, and assented. Germany alone objected, and her Emperor himself journeyed to Moroc to make his objection effective Sultan of Morocco was thus persuaded by Germany to withdraw his assent to the establishment of French influences and to request instead, at Germany suggestion, a conference of all the gresuggestion, a conference of all the great powers upon the matter. To this France naturally demurs, and Great Britain is understood to support France in disapproving the plan of a conference and in holding to the original proposal. Thereupon, Germany suggests that, if the powers cannot agree upon a conference, her own influence be made paramount in Morocco instead of France's."

But that is not the whole question by any manner of means, so far as Germany concerned. With the downfall of Russia, Germany naturally aspires to be the dominant Power on the continent of Europe, and the Kalser looks with suspicion and disfavor upon the friendly relationship between Great Britain and France. Therefore, when it was announce ed the other day in terms so emphatic as to have the flavor of belligerency that Great Britain was supporting France in her determination not to participate in the proposed international conference, Germany wanted to know what the meaning of it was, and reports go to able family, he was true and faithful, to the Kaiser. The Kaiser had taken the position that the conference should be held, and, although he now says that the details shall be adjusted later, he insists that France shall accept in principle the plan of such a conference, France is evidently considering the proposals more favorably, and it is further announced that the British declination to participate in the conference was enlirely free from the belligerent tone ascribed to it.

The milk in the cocoanut is in statement sent out from Berlin that "German diplomacy has inserted a wedge between France and Great Britain and destroyed the growing friendship between them by putting France in such position that she made demands on this friendship which Great Britain would not meet."

There may be interesting developments to follow, but upon the face of it as i appears now that incident is practically closed. All danger of war between France and Germany is past. In the meantime, John Bull looks sullen; France looks chagrined; the Kaiser wears smile of triumph.

An Evil and the Remedy.

If there ever was a doubt that the Democratic voters of Virginia wanted the primary, it has been removed. Every is popular in Virginia. We feel sure that tax in advance in order that they may have a trace of sporting blood in their veins love a contest. It has been a between political parties in Virginia. The Democratic party has been having a walk-over in the general election, and the only contest is in the selection of candidates. This year there is a spirited contest between the candidates for the nomination for Governor and United States senator, and Democrats will have the privilege of voting direct for the man of their choice. No wonder they The Democrats of Richmond will hold they have elected members of the General Assembly, and these members have of Governor they have elected delegates mary, our affairs will not be entangled the great body of Democrats having no tion. But this year Democrats will vote

> But while the voters will have the priv lege and the fun, the candidates will be called upon to pay the cost of the prisome tax upon most of them. In addition pay out a considerable sum to defray the expense of his canvass, and if any candidate for Governor or senator gets off for which he is running, he will be lucky This will be hard enough upon the suc tant price to the others for the privilege of running in the Democratic primary and unless something be done hereafte to relieve the situation, the Virginia primary plan will be a failure. Either the will be between men of means only or the poor will have to call upon out be embarrassing to the honest man, and with others it would open splendid op-

There is but one sure remedy, and that is the measure which The Times-Dispatch has long advocated. Ther should be a legalized primary plan in dotail, and the cost of election should be borne by each county and city, with the restriction that only the leading provision. There are but two leading parties in Virginia. The Republicans are they would not be ant to have a primary even if the expenses should be borne by the government. In all human prob ability the counties and cities would Democratic primary, and that would be positions and vote for them. If, in spite so small that no county or city would of this, inferior men are chosen, it will feel it. Moreover, the money thus disbursed would not go out of the commun your duty as a good citizen. Vote for the ity. There can be no two opinions that simply have to pay for the cost of the of public welfare, and the tax-payers

The fact is, Democracy revolts at the bare suggestion of compelling candidates to pay the cost of an election. In any event, the plan is wrong in principle and its tendency is mischievous and vicious. If candidates be compelled to pay the cost of a primary election-and in Virginia the primary is a far more important election than the regular elec tion-why not compel them to pay the cost of a regular election? It is but too plain that such a scheme would soon result in turning over the entire government to the money power. An elec tion is for the benefit of the public, and not for the benefit of the candidates. At least that is the principle, and the people should pay the cost.

should pay the cost.

The voters have the remedy in their own hands, and they should require the candidates for the General Assembly to commit themselves to a legalized primary, the cost to be paid by the coun-

We are distressed to hear of the death of Judge Berryman Green, of Danville. He was one of the ablest lawyers in Virginia, and he performed a most valuable service to the State ap a member of the Constitutional Convention, Judge Green was a good Democrat, but he was first of all a patriotic citizen and was always true to the duties of citizenship. He was greatly beloved in his native city of Danville and admired and respected throughout the entire State, As Confederate soldier, as a servant of the State in many positions of trust, as citizen and as the head of an honor

The French, German and English papers, while praising President Roosevelt to the skies for his success in trapping the dove of peace for Russia and Japan, are pointing out the fact that the sudden prominence of United States in diplomacy will lay certain burdens on the shoulders of our government that will be new to us, Some these papers assert that America will be brought more and more into international diplomatic struggles because of her increasing weight, both relative and actual, in population, wealth and millitary strength, and that she will make her moral influence sought by every other They speak of the importance of Washington as a diplomatic center and say that this importance must increase with the growth of American naval strength and with the interest the United States takes in its relations with other powers. Richmond is making an effort to divert valley trade to that city. So far as this immediate section is concerned, the plan will fail. We are quite convenient to the Eastern cities, while Richmond is out of the way. Richmond does not expect to accomplish the impossible, but if the railroad can make the Valley section as conven ient to Richmond as to the Northern cities, they should do so. Cost of the Primary.

Cost of the Primary.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:
Sir,—While it is absurd to imagine that the coming Democratic State primary can be held without cost, it is in my opinion as equally absurd to make the candidates bear this cost. The very idea of it is repugnant to me. The State must have national representation. State officials, representatives, etc., and it falls upon the Democratic party to supply them, and here it is the men who offer to fill these positions are made to pay considerable sums of money at the risk of being turned down without getting the office, and minus their cash. The poor in purse cannot aspire to nominations in the primary, while those of affluence must stand and deliver before they can enter, thus from either view point, it looks bad, very bad, and calls for correction. Therefore, the Democratic voters of the State should put their hands in their pockets and raise sufficient funds to hold the primary without calling upon candidates to contribute one cent more to this fund than any other citizen of equal financial ability. Let us Democrate of Virginia raise money by popular subscription to run this one, and try and devise some plan by which future ones can be held with money in sight beforehand to pay the bills.

Early Closing.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

8s: —I have been very much intrested in the movement among the retail merchants for early closing during the summer. This is a subject that I have given considerable thought, and I am thoughly convinced that shorter hours will mean a free service, for with healthy body and a free mind, which we get from sufficient recreation, enables us to give our employers the very best sorvice possible.

Why not let all denartments of business close at 6 o'clock! The result would be as much hysiness as heretofore. Just let the public know the hour of closing, and I am sure they can do their shopping or attend to their other business in the time allotted. I am heartily in favor of early closine all the year.

Big Fish in Brunswick.

NEWELL, VA., June 19.—Mr. S. H. Coller caught in his mill pond near here a carp that measured three feet and two inches and weighed thirty-five pounds, which was the largest fish ever seen in his section. CARD FROM COLONEL ANDERSON.

CARD FROM COLONEL ANDERSON.
To my Friends in the City of Richmond:
In all elections there are many men who go to the polls with minds made up to vote for only one or two candidates on with perfect indifference as to others.
In our primary to-day there will be names of more than thirty candidates on the ballot for a dozen or more offices.
Many men will select a candidate for Commonwealth's attorney when they reach the polls.
I ask those who feel interest in my success to give me such time at the polls today as they can afford—especially at the ordinary hours for meds and in the closing hours of the voting—in order that by their influence as many voters who have no choice may be influenced in my favor as possible.

favor as possible.

My construction of the pure election law forbids the employment of men to work at the polls in a candidate's interest. and my reliance must therefore be upon

A HAPPY HOME

Is one where health abounds. With impure blood there can-not be good health. With a disordered LIVER there cannot be good blood.

Pure blood means health. Health means happiness. Take no Substitute. All Druggists.
